Dry Whey - Western Europe

Report 31 - Released on July 30, 2020

Western Europe prices for dry whey are slightly higher. A weakening U.S. dollar is a factor in higher prices expressed in Dollars. Prices tend to be highest at some plants in Germany, lower in Netherlands. Dry whey markets are calm. More than adequate amounts of food grade dry whey are available. Contracts are being filled on time. There is spot market whey available for buyers who need whey. This leads to calmer transactions with less price friction.
